

Laurie Bell, Fashion for Outdoor Rooms

Ryan Hughes Design | Build

designing an outdoor room these days includes a television, fire pit, water feature, lighting and the list goes on and on. The space usually doesn't have a planter with green plants located at the base of the wall.

The goal of the project was to create a relaxing, modern outdoor space. It was built to be the ultimate outdoor retreat. Even the seating was made to accommodate a large number of people for the spring breakers as well as the evening crowd. All this is contained all back to with 1-2-3!

To create an outdoor design, capitalizing on the natural elements that abound is a strategy for success. Whether you're in a city or in a rural area, the use of natural elements around the outdoor space can add drama and create a more relaxed atmosphere. Some designers use natural materials, like stone or rock, to create a more natural look. Others use modern materials, like metal or glass, to create a more contemporary look.

Outdoor projects are now greatly in vogue. For many, the idea of an outdoor living space is a dream. For others, it's a reality. Whether you're looking for a new outdoor living space or just want to update your existing one, there are many options available. The key is to work with a professional who can help you create a space that is both functional and beautiful.

In creating an outdoor design, capitalizing on the natural elements that abound is a strategy for success

The outdoor living space design with the addition of natural materials and accessories may be the goal. In today's outdoor living spaces, there are so many options from lighting to outdoor rugs, from outdoor furniture to the very popular outdoor kitchen. Whether you're looking for a new outdoor living space or just want to update your existing one, there are many options available. The key is to work with a professional who can help you create a space that is both functional and beautiful.

Whether designing landscapes or relaxing around a fireplace, creating a beautiful outdoor living space is a dream for many. The key is to work with a professional who can help you create a space that is both functional and beautiful.

Ryan Hughes is a member of Ryan Hughes Design | Build. He can be reached at Ryan@RHDesign.com.

www.RHDesign.com (11)